Visitors to Poland could use a few official warning signs to help them cope. Here are twelve signs I would like to see put up at strategic locations around Poland's tourist spots.

Men with shaved heads are not necessarily ex-convicts or skinheads (though they might be)

Churchill is not as universally popular as you might have been led to believe

This shop has no change, and by the time you leave neither will you

Proper dancing, with feet, is expected in this area

High risk of non-ironic 70s-style moustaches in this area

Handshaking is required at ALL times

Hordes of ridiculously attractive women – please watch where you are walking

* * *

Wedding feast area – do not attempt to eat everything

* * *

Designated English-tourist area – men wearing dresses may not leave this zone

* * *

High risk of Polish tongue twisters

* * *

Do not drink between vodka shots

* * *

Non-stereotype zone – expectations of tractor factories and food queues will not be met
