

MINE LOCATED ON TWIN PEAKS

Manganese Claim in This City Filed for Record by Discoverer.

John Zachert, a mining engineer, has discovered a manganese mine on the northern slope of Twin Peaks and filed his claim with notice of location in the Hall of Records yesterday, complying with all legal requirements for recording a mineral claim. Zachert, after making the discovery of the mineral deposit, assayed the croppings and became satisfied that he found a vein of the mineral. He then staked out the claim, marked the boundaries with the regulation posts, taking up 1500 lineal feet, following the course of the lead, and also 600 feet in width, at equal distance from the center of the vein.

The discoverer named his claim the Victor Manganese Mine. Withold Zachert and Helena Zachert are associated with the discoverer as locators of the claim. They have done sufficient work and have taken out ore enough from the claim to prove that they have a mineral vein. The mineral is valuable in the manufacture of glass and as an alloy to other metals.

We Can Prove It.

Cheap things are seldom good, but good things may be cheap. Look at our Clocks, Candelabra and lovely ornaments, dainty Statues and new effects in Mirrors, and deny it if you can. Sanborn, Vall & Co., 741 Market st.

HAWAII GETS NEWS BY WAY OF CABLE

Pardee's Election Learned at Fanning Island and Told at Honolulu.

Practical use of the British-Australian cable in enabling the people of Hawaii to obtain news of the outside world was made for the first time on the morning of November 11th, when the Oceanic Company's liner Ventura reached Honolulu from Fanning Island with news of the election of Pardee as Governor and victory for the Republicans generally. Within an hour after the information reached Honolulu the enterprising island newspapers had extras out, and great interest was shown in the dispatch, which, through meager, appeared to be satisfactory to the mass of the people. The news was picked up by the Ventura on November 8th at the Fanning Island Cable Station. It was expected here that the steamer Sonoma, sailing hence on November 6th, would first give the election news to Hawaii's residents, but the distinction fell to the Ventura, which not only reached Honolulu a day earlier but, had two days' later news. The men in charge of the cable station reported that the submarine line was not yet officially in operation, though working satisfactorily, and through their courtesy the officers of the Ventura were given the privilege of franking messages to their relatives or friends in this city.